Chain Merges with Lightyear, Goes All-In on Stellar

Combined company, to be called Interstellar, will help organizations build on the Stellar Network; Stellar Development Foundation to remain independent

SAN FRANCISCO, September 10, 2018 – Chain, Inc. (“Chain”) today announced it has been acquired by Lightyear Corporation (“Lightyear”), a Stellar-focused commercial entity formed last year with the support of the Stellar Development Foundation. The Chain and Lightyear brands will be retired and the combined company will be re-named to Interstellar.

The merger brings Chain’s enterprise products and customer base to Stellar’s global public ledger, creating an end-to-end solution that will enable organizations to issue, exchange, and manage assets on a highly-scalable public network. Chain’s cloud ledger service, Sequence, will allow organizations to easily track assets as they

- Adam Ludwin, who is Chain’s CEO, will be Interstellar’s CEO
- Jed McCaleb, who co-founded the Stellar Development Foundation and Lightyear, will be CTO of Interstellar
- The Stellar Development Foundation, which develops the Stellar protocol and supports the open source community, remains independent

Mojaloop Foundation COE for CBDCs: The Mojaloop Foundation Center of Excellence (COE) for Central Bank Digital Currencies (CBDC) has been formed to help drive the foundation's mission of advancing financial inclusion in emerging markets.

Purpose of the Mojaloop Foundation COE for CBDCs: The COE will collaborate on initiatives, such as hackathons, workshops, and pilot projects, that examine how Mojaloop open source software can leverage CBDCs to reduce the costs and inefficiencies of fast payment platforms and cross-border payments. The COE will extend Mojaloop's ecosystem engagement, leverage Singapore's proximity and connectivity to other regions, and connect the underserved with financial services firms and government entities in the emerging digital economy.

Mojaloop Foundation COE for CBDCs Working Group: To help guide the direction of the COE's initiatives, we have formed the Mojaloop Foundation COE for CBDCs Working Group with appointees from Mojaloop Foundation members including the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, Coil, Google, ModusBox, the Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS), RedCompass Labs, Ripple and Sybrin.
